Staff Report

Origin

At the February 21, 2002 meeting of the Finance Select Committee staff were asked to prepare an information report relative to the tax status of the church properties on No. 5 Road between Blundell Road and Steveston Highway.

Analysis

Several years ago the City adopted a policy that allowed various religious institutions along No. 5 Road to develop on Agriculturally zoned land provided the institution was constructed in the front 1/3 of the property and the remainder of the property was to be actively farmed.

These religious institutions by their very nature receive a statutory tax exemption. This exemption is authorized by the British Columbia Assessment Authority (BCAA). The City Council also has power to authorize a Permissive Tax Exemption if certain criteria, as adopted by Council, are met. Actively farming a property is not one of these criteria.

The tax exemptions are realized through a reduction in assessed value and consequently the tax savings are generated from a tax rate being applied against a lower valued property.

Many of these religious institutions are very large, and in many cases are seen as regional facilities for the specific religious denominations. It should also be pointed out that many of the facilities are now used as banquet facilities that are rentable by the public. There have been a few complaints over the past several years from private commercial businesses stating that these religious institutions have a direct financial advantage over private sector business. They claim that because of the unique tax advantage of the religious institutions the private sector is competing in the market place with a group that has a direct rental pricing advantage.

In regards to the properties fronting Blundell Road between No. 5 road and Highway 99 and those fronting the east side of No. 5 Road between Blundell Road and Steveston Highway there are a total of 34 properties within these boundaries. Of these properties nine (9) have a church designation and of those nine (9), only two (2) have received a farm classification by the BCAA. This in fact means that on two (2) of the properties are presently actively being farmed. The balance seven (7) are receiving some form of tax exemption. See Table 1 for details.

Financial Impact

If the City were to remove the permissive tax exemption designation from those properties not farming the land the owners would be required to pay an extra $76,280 in property taxes based on the 2001 exemptions and tax rates.

Conclusion

That this report be submitted for the information of Committee.
